

ABSTRACT

A method of dynamically managing and improving the reliability, accuracy and quality of collected information comprising presenting the user with a hierarchically structured set of predefined terms, receiving reported information from a user corresponding to at least one of the predefined terms, structuring, categorizing and characterizing the reported information, dynamically converting the reported information into a standardized output and storing the standardized output.